

William Angliss Donation Policy

William Angliss Learning Resource Centre (LRC) Special Collections adds value to the Institute's teaching, learning and research strategy. The collection consists mainly of Australian culinary book material. The collection is 'closed access' because of the material's age, value or uniqueness to Australia's social history.

The LRC accepts donations of suitable rare and obscure books, menus and ephemera in the following areas:

- Australian and English culinary materials
- Wine studies
- Institute history

As a result, the LRC reserves the right to accept donations only if they enrich the collection and enhance future research.

Materials such as textbooks, novels, popular magazines and other commonly-available works are not accepted.

Significant collections of suitable material are always welcome and the LRC is happy to discuss appropriate recognition of such donations.

We always reserve the right to dispose the materials in a suitable manner including returning to the donor, giving to another library, or recycling.

Acceptance of Donation

I have been given a copy of the policy of donations.

I confirm that my donation is made without restriction.

I understand that the LRC Service may use the donation as it deems appropriate.
